

Advanced undergraduate business programs

Bachelor of Advanced Business (Honours) and Bachelor of Advanced Finance and Economics (Honours)

“Being part of a smaller group ensures we receive valuable regular contact with lecturers alongside other opportunities not usually available to first-year students, including weekly seminars from industry professionals.”

Josephine Auer

Bachelor of Advanced Finance and Economics (Honours) graduate, Queensland's 2023 Rhodes Scholar and UQ's 2020 Graduate of the Year

Which advanced business program is right for you?

Both the Bachelor of Advanced Business (Honours) and the Bachelor of Advanced Finance and Economics (Honours) are 4-year programs with an honours year built-in and are designed for high-achieving individuals with leadership ambitions.

Bachelor of Advanced Business (Honours)

- Specialise in Accounting, Business Analytics, Business Information Systems, Finance, Human Resources, Innovation & Entrepreneurship, or International Business and Marketing.
- Choose a professional pathway and study up to 2 majors, or a research pathway, which can lead to a PhD or career roles requiring robust research skills.
- Provides interdisciplinary exposure, career flexibility and industry placement opportunities, making it an ideal choice for those seeking broad business knowledge and leadership or entrepreneurial roles.

Bachelor of Advanced Finance and Economics (Honours)

- 50% of courses are exclusive to this program.
- Graduate with specific industry skills sought after by employers.
- In your final year, you can choose to specialise in either economics or finance while completing a supervised individual research thesis.

Pathways to advanced business programs

If you don't get into your program of choice the first time you apply, you can still work towards your goals by enrolling in another identified UQ Business School program full-time. Once you've completed one year of full-time study (16 units or more) at a bachelor level or higher, your selection rank will be based only on this study. You may also receive credit toward your new degree from shared courses or general electives.

The entry score for each respective honours program will vary every year depending on demand. Scan QR code for more information.
